By combining specialized AI tools across every stage of development, I build and tested project. I leveraged Gemini to elaborate raw requirements into structured user stories and mock files, then used Claude Code with the Superpowers skill framework to handle systematic, self-documenting implementation. Finally, I integrated Claude Code paired with Gemini Mini via API key to power the core AI logic, creating a fully documented and production-ready build.

1. This is second project, already got Claude Pro account, GitHub MCP setup in Claude Code and downloaded superpower skill.
2. Used Gemini Web to create requirements from the ideas shared in the handouts. Saved the user stories as pages.
3. Got the CSV created by Gemini Web.
4. Asked Claude Code to use the superpowers skill and implement the requirements. Asked for any improvements.
5. Went with the native approach, approved plan once to implement it.
6. Tested: http://localhost:8501/
7. Provided open api key in .env file. Used model gpt-40-mini. Leveraged the open api key used in my first project.

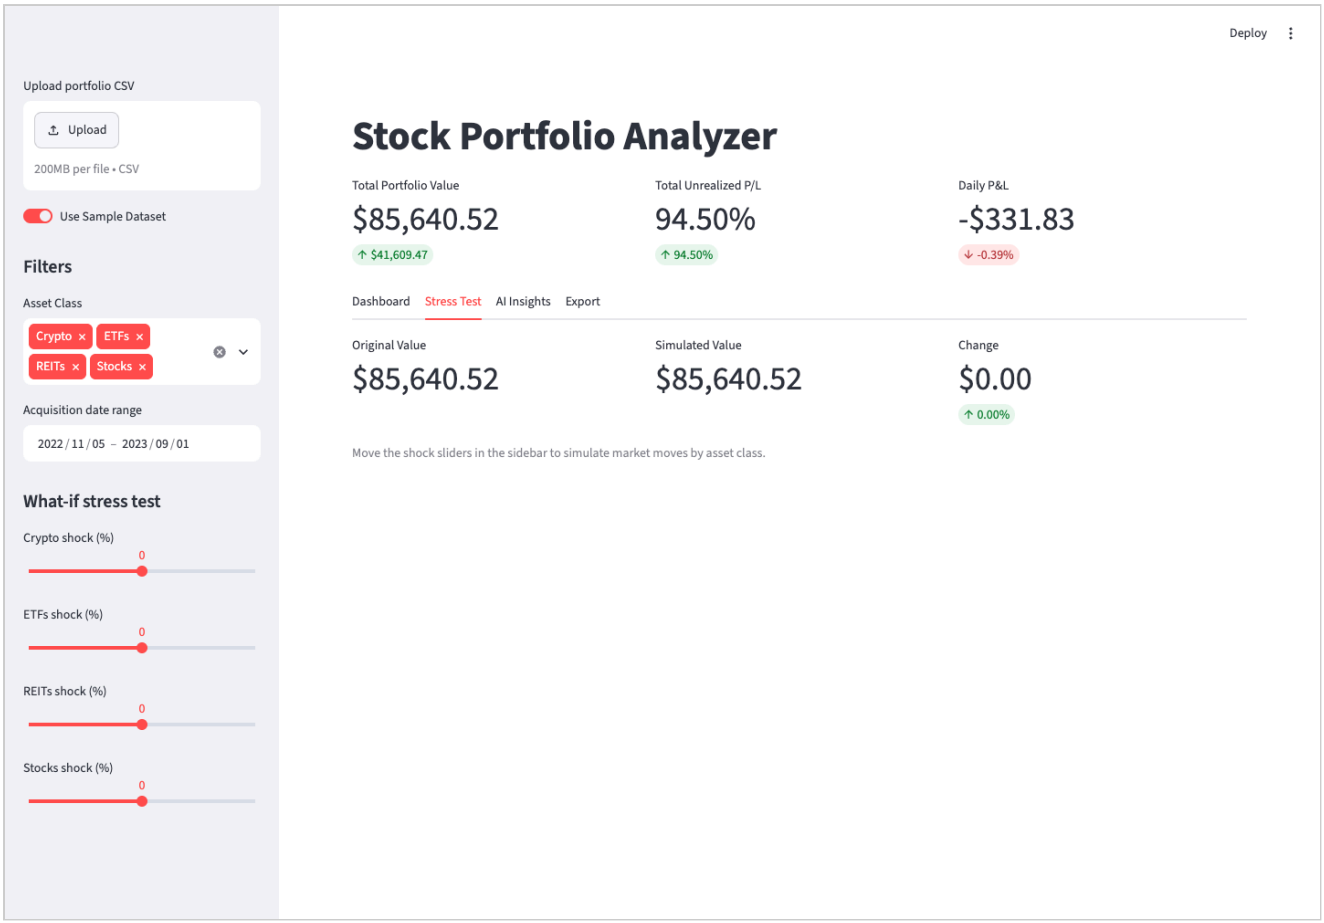

Even the screenshots included in this documentation were generated using gemini :)
